| | | | | |
|-----|-------|-------|--------------|------|
| eat | coins | notes | animal skins | gold |
|-----|-------|-------|--------------|------|

Long, long ago, people did not use coins and notes to pay for things. In those days, they used bartering as a way of exchanging goods. If someone had a lot of tobacco, but not enough food to eat, he or she needed to find someone who would exchange some food for tobacco. Things such as beads, salt, animal skins, cattle and tobacco were exchanged. Later people began using pieces of gold and silver to pay for goods. Later, the pieces of metal were used to make coins. Today, we use notes and coins or credit cards to pay for goods.
